Editor's Note

Francisco López Capillas (1608 - 1674) has been called the 'first great native-New-World composer'.¹ To this day the most extensive research on Capillas and his work has been conducted by Lester D. Brothers, who has written extensively on music in the Spanish possessions of the Americas, and who redacted an article on Capillas' Missa Super Scalam Aretinam from his doctoral thesis.²

Capillas was born in Mexico City, and admitted to the choir of Mexico City Cathedral in 1625. By 1643 he was assistant organist at Puebla Cathedral, leaving in 1648. There is no trace of his activity between this date and 1654, when he presented a collection of his works, amongst which was the Missa Super Scalam Aretinam to the authorities of Mexico City Cathedral. A little over one month later he was appointed choirmaster and principal organist after the timely death of the incumbent Fabian Ximeno. He continued as choirmaster until his death in 1674. His output includes no less than eight mass and magnificat settings, and a handful of motets can be attributed to him.

² Lester D. Brothers. "A New-World Hexachord Mass by Francisco López Capillas".

The Hexachord Mass

Capillas' Missa Super Scalam Aretinam is one of many extant 'Hexachord Masses' utilising the solemnisation system described by Guido of Arezzo (c. 991 – after 1033) as a thematic basis; Capillas weaves ascending and descending 6 note scales throughout the mass, often structured over the use of a hexachord as a cantus firmus in one of the parts. Such use of the hexachord was particularly popular in the seventeenth century, whether appearing in solfege-based puns in secular song, mass settings or instrumental toccatas and fantasias supra ut-re-mi-fa-so-la. Capillas' setting, however, verges on what Brothers describes as 'obsolescence'.³ The entire mass is composed in tempus perfectum, a practice so outdated that it apparently received no small amount of criticism from the singers of Mexico City Cathedral: in a Declaracion de la Missa, surviving as a preface to the Missa in the choirbook Mexico City Cathedral VII, Capillas writes that "Some people criticised this work and to satisfy them, I shall put here the authorities of great masters from whom I learned what has been worked out."⁴ As part of his defence, he also points to six examples in the mass of passages where mensural difficulties were apparently insurmountable without explanation; for each, he cites examples from Richafort, Palestrina, Anuario Interamericano de Investigacion Musical, Vol. 9 (1973), pp. 5-44. Brothers' thesis, The Hexachord Mass: 1600-1720. University of California, 1973) focuses more widely on the Hexachord Mass in the seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries.

Loyola and Morales amongst others to justify his usage.⁵

The Edition

This edition represents the first typeset edition of the Missa Super Scalam Aretinam, based on the copy preserved in M. 2428 at the Madrid Biblioteca Nacional. In imperfecting difficult passages, we have followed Brothers' analysis of Capillas' Declaracion.⁶ The underlay contained in M. 2428 is remarkably precise, if inconsistent, and we have replicated it in its entirety, with the underlay italicised in cases where iteration marks are found in the manuscript. Spelling largely accords with conventional usage, but such divergences as 'terrae' rather than 'terra' in the Gloria have been preserved. Punctuation has been added in accordance with modern usage in order to improve readability, though capitalisation of the Credo's 'Et Incarnatus Est' has been preserved.

Where the Gloria and Credo were effectively divided into movements in the manuscript source, we have chosen not to split systems, and instead mark such occasions with double barlines. As the Osana is set in a different prolation and as a canon, we have chosen to separate it from the Sanctus, and while preserving the instructions for working out the canon noted in M. 2428, we have also chosen to write it out in full.

No underlay or music for the ending of the Agnus Dei, 'dona nobis pacem', exists in M. 2428. This may be rectified by repeating the Agnus Dei in full, replacing iterations of 'miserere nobis' with 'dona nobis pacem'.

M. 2428 is sparing in supplying accidentals, and these we have suggested, in accordance with the rules of Musica Ficta, using accidentals above the note in question. Where accidentals are noted in M. 2428 but appear incongruous (such as in the Sanctus, bar 7, Altus II) we have bracketed them.

The nature of Capillas' theme and his strict adherence to preserving the integrity of its iterations leads to several difficult passages throughout the mass, and as such we have applied corrections only sparingly, and in cases where scribal error seemed obvious. These corrections are indicated by the use of small noteheads.

The Missa was given its first performance in modern times by Musica Antica Rotherhithe at Holy Trinity Church, Rotherhithe, London, on 16 December 2022. This edition was made possible by generous support from the Cavalli Foundation, which seeks to advance learning and education in the field of early music.
